Management Discussion and Analysis

Global Economic Scenario

The world economy in 2024 is characterized by moderate growth, with significant regional variations. Inflationary pressures, geopolitical risks, and the energy transition are key drivers of the global economic landscape. While the long-term outlook points to continued technological innovation and a shift toward sustainability, the short-term challenges of inflation, trade tensions, and debt remain significant. Countries that can navigate these challenges effectively, particularly by investing in technology and green energy, are likely to emerge as leaders in the global economy.

Global economic growth is projected to moderate in 2024, with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) forecasting global GDP growth of around 3%. This marks a deceleration compared to pre-pandemic levels, influenced by a slowdown in advanced economies and uneven recovery in emerging markets. Advanced economies, are expected to see slower growth, while some emerging markets, such as India and parts of Southeast Asia, are poised for faster expansion. Sub-Saharan Africa and Latin America remain more vulnerable to economic shocks and slower growth.

Inflation remains a major concern in 2024, though it has begun to ease in some regions. Central banks are focused on balancing inflation control with economic growth. Inflation is driven by factors such as energy price fluctuations, labor shortages, and lingering supply chain disruptions.

Major central banks, including the U.S. Federal Reserve, European Central Bank (ECB), and Bank of England, are maintaining higher interest rates to tame inflation. The pace of rate hikes is slowing, but the high cost of borrowing is impacting consumer spending, business investments, and housing markets.

The war in Ukraine continues to have far-reaching effects, particularly on energy and food markets. Europe, in particular, has had to pivot away from Russian energy imports, accelerating its energy transition to renewables and LNG (liquefied natural gas) sources.

The war between Israel and Palestine has affected global logistics movement having impact on economy.

Governments and corporations are increasingly investing in renewable energy sources, such as wind, solar, and hydrogen, driven by climate goals and energy security concerns. The shift to a low-carbon economy is creating new industries and reshaping traditional energy markets.

Traditional fossil fuels, especially oil and natural gas, remain volatile due to geopolitical factors, such as sanctions on Russia and supply constraints from OPEC+ decisions. However, the growing adoption of green energy is beginning to stabilize long-term energy costs.

The global supply chain landscape has been undergoing structural changes since the COVID-19 pandemic, with many companies diversifying their suppliers away from China to mitigate risks. Regions like Southeast Asia and Mexico are benefiting from this shift.

New trade deals and regional agreements, particularly in Asia and Africa, are shaping the future of global commerce. These agreements are focusing on areas such as digital trade, sustainability, and technology.

Indian Economic Scenario

India's economic scenario in 2024 is marked by resilience, growth opportunities, and ongoing challenges. The country is experiencing a mix of robust economic activity, policy reforms, and external factors influencing its growth trajectory.

India is expected to grow at a robust pace in 2024, with estimates of GDP growth hovering around 6-6.5%. This positions India as one of the fastest-growing major economies, driven by domestic demand, government investments, and expanding industries like technology and manufacturing. Key growth drivers include government-led infrastructure projects, increased private investment, consumer demand, and a growing services sector, especially in IT, finance, and healthcare.

Inflation remains a concern, but it is expected to moderate compared to the high levels seen in previous years. The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) continues to implement measures to keep inflation in check, balancing between supporting growth and controlling price increases. The RBI has maintained a cautious stance on interest rates, keeping them elevated to manage inflation but remaining accommodative enough to support growth.

The Indian government's focus on boosting domestic manufacturing through initiatives like the "Make in India" and Production-Linked Incentive (PLI) schemes has started to show results. Key sectors like electronics, pharmaceuticals, and automotive are seeing increased production, with India emerging as a competitive manufacturing hub. India's industrial growth is benefiting from policy reforms and increasing foreign direct investment (FDI) in sectors such as electronics, defense, and semiconductors. Manufacturing is becoming more diversified and tech-driven, creating job opportunities and improving export capabilities.

The Indian government's focus on infrastructure development remains a central pillar of its growth strategy. Major projects, including roads, railways, ports, and airports, are under development to enhance connectivity and boost economic productivity.

The agriculture sector, which remains vital to the Indian economy, is seeing mixed results. While productivity has increased, driven by better irrigation, technology, and crop diversification, challenges like climate change, erratic monsoons, and farm income disparities persist.

Government initiatives focusing on rural development, such as improving rural infrastructure, digital access, and financial inclusion, are helping lift the rural economy. However, rural distress remains a concern due to uneven income growth and agricultural dependency.

India is making substantial strides in renewable energy, particularly solar and wind. The government's ambitious targets aim to transition India towards a more sustainable energy mix, reducing reliance on coal and other fossil fuels. India is emerging as a leader in the global clean energy transition.

While renewable energy is expanding, India still relies heavily on coal for electricity generation. Balancing energy security with climate commitments is a key challenge, especially as demand for energy continues to grow.

India's economy in 2024 is on a solid growth path, benefiting from domestic demand, policy reforms, and investment in key sectors like infrastructure, manufacturing, and technology. India's global influence continues to rise, positioning it as a key player in the world economy, particularly in trade, technology, and sustainability.

Agriculture Sector

The Indian agriculture sector continues to play a crucial role in the economy, contributing around 16-18% to the country's GDP and employing nearly 50% of its workforce. However, the sector is facing both opportunities and challenges as it transitions through modernization, climate impacts, and policy reforms.

The agriculture sector is expected to grow at a moderate pace, contributing to food security and rural livelihoods. While the overall contribution to GDP is decreasing as other sectors grow, agriculture remains vital for employment and sustenance, especially in rural areas.

MSP remains a central issue for farmers, with the government continuing to support key crops like rice and wheat. However, there is an increasing push toward reducing the dependence on MSP and encouraging diversification into other, more remunerative crops.

Technology is transforming Indian agriculture, with increased use of precision farming techniques. Technologies like drones, satellite imagery, and IoT-based sensors are helping farmers monitor crops, optimize irrigation, and improve yields.

The rise of digital platforms and mobile applications is providing farmers with real-time data on weather, crop prices, and farming practices. These platforms are also helping connect farmers to buyers, reducing intermediaries, and ensuring better price discovery.

The government and private sector are promoting sustainable agricultural practices, including organic farming, reduced chemical use, and conservation agriculture. Organic farming, though still a small part of Indian agriculture, is growing due to increased demand for organic products both domestically and internationally.

A large portion of Indian agriculture still relies heavily on monsoons, making the sector vulnerable to climate variability. While irrigation infrastructure has improved, only about half of the cultivated land is irrigated, leading to productivity challenges.

The government is investing in large-scale irrigation projects and promoting micro-irrigation techniques like drip and sprinkler systems to ensure more efficient water use, particularly in water-scarce regions like Rajasthan and Gujarat.

The agriculture supply chain in India is becoming more efficient, aided by investments in cold storage, transportation, and logistics. This is reducing post-harvest losses, particularly in perishable goods like fruits and vegetables.

The government's electronic National Agriculture Market (e-NAM) is helping farmers gain better access to markets, reducing the need for middlemen. However, full-scale adoption of these platforms is still in progress, with many farmers continuing to rely on traditional local markets (mandis).

PM-Kisan: Direct income support continues to be provided under the PM-Kisan scheme, offering financial relief to small and marginal farmers. The scheme is expected to reach more farmers in 2024 as the government enhances its coverage.

National Mission for Sustainable Agriculture (NMSA): This program aims to promote sustainable farming techniques, better water management, and climate-resilient crops. The government is also supporting the development of infrastructure like cold storage, warehouses, and transportation to reduce post-harvest losses.

Fertilizer Sector

Fertilizer consumption in India continues to rise steadily in 2024, driven by increasing agricultural output and the push for higher crop yields. India remains one of the largest consumers of fertilizers globally, with urea, DAP (diammonium phosphate), and MOP (muriate of potash) being the key fertilizers used.

The government is promoting the balanced use of fertilizers through campaigns to improve soil health and reduce the overuse of certain fertilizers like urea. This is a response to the long-standing issue of imbalanced fertilizer use, which has led to soil degradation in many parts of the country.

India has been focusing on increasing its domestic fertilizer production capacity to reduce its dependency on imports, particularly in the case of urea. Several new plants are being commissioned in 2024 under the government's self-reliance initiative (Atmanirbhar Bharat). This includes reviving older, defunct fertilizer plants and expanding existing ones.

Despite efforts to boost domestic production, India remains dependent on imports for certain key fertilizers like phosphate and potash. Global price volatility in raw materials and finished fertilizers impacts the domestic market, leading to fluctuations in availability and prices.

There is an increasing emphasis on organic and bio-fertilizers as part of India's sustainable agriculture initiatives. The government is promoting the use of organic inputs and bio-fertilizers to improve soil health, reduce chemical inputs, and lower the environmental impact of agriculture.

Programs such as the National Mission on Sustainable Agriculture (NMSA) are being leveraged to encourage farmers to adopt sustainable fertilizer practices, which include reducing excessive chemical fertilizer use and adopting integrated nutrient management practices.

The sector is highly regulated due to the critical nature of fertilizers in agriculture. The pricing of key fertilizers like urea is controlled by the government, while market-based pricing applies to others like DAP, though with government subsidies. Competition among players is intense, with a focus on maintaining supply chains and improving efficiency.

Global events, such as the Russia-Ukraine conflict, continue to impact the availability and pricing of key fertilizers in 2024. India, being a significant importer of phosphate and potash, is vulnerable to global price fluctuations. This has prompted India to explore long-term supply agreements with countries rich in these resources, such as Russia, Canada, and Morocco.

India is also looking to become a major exporter of fertilizers, particularly urea, as domestic production increases. Efforts to modernize plants and make them more efficient may help India become more competitive in the global fertilizer market.

One of the major challenges faced by the fertilizer industry is the rising cost of raw materials like natural gas (for urea production) and phosphoric acid (for DAP). These costs are largely driven by global market trends, making domestic production and pricing more difficult to manage.

Global supply chain issues continue to affect the availability of fertilizers, leading to price volatility. The sector is focusing on building more resilient supply chains and reducing dependence on imports through long-term partnerships.

As India pushes for a greener future, the fertilizer sector is expected to increasingly embrace sustainable practices, including the use of organic fertilizers and more efficient chemical fertilizers like nano urea. These developments will help reduce the environmental impact of the industry while supporting agricultural productivity.

Government Policies

The Indian government continues to implement various fertilizer policies aimed at ensuring the availability of affordable fertilizers, promoting sustainable practices, and improving the efficiency of the sector.

- Urea Subsidy Scheme: Presently, Urea is being provided to the farmers at a statutorily notified Maximum Retail Price. Per bag of urea. Under the scheme, the difference between the delivered cost of urea at farm gate and net market realization by the urea units is given as subsidy to the urea manufacturer or importer.
- Nutrient Based Subsidy Scheme: Subsidy rates of P&K fertilizers under this scheme were increased on 20th May 2021 and 13th October 2021, and then further increased substantially for Kharif-2022, so that these fertilizers are available at affordable prices to the farmers.
- Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT) project for fertilizer subsidy payment: Department of Fertilizers (DoF) has implemented the scheme for fertilizer subsidy payment to improve fertilizer service delivery to farmers. Under the DBT system, 100% subsidy on various fertilizer grades is released to the fertilizer companies on the basis of actual sales made by the retailers to the beneficiaries.
- Nano Urea: The Government of India recently notified the specifications of Nano nitrogen under Fertilizer Control Order 1985. Nano fertilizers hold great promise for application in plant nourishment because of the size-dependent qualities, high surface volume ratio and unique optical properties.
- One Nation One Fertilizers: The Government decided to implement One Nation One Fertilizers by introducing Single Brand for fertilizers and Logo under fertilizer subsidy scheme namely "PradhanmantriBharatiyaUra-varakPariyogna". The single brand name for urea, DAP, MOP and NPKs etc would be Bharat Urea, Bharat DAP, Bharat MOP and Bharat NPK respectively for all fertilizer companies and importers. New Brand name and logo to be used by all fertilizer companies from 30th November, 2022 for imported urea, Indigenous Urea and Imported PNK and from 31st December, 2022 for Indigenous PNK. The release of fertilizer subsidy to companies will be considered only for fertilizer dispatches in the new bags after the above-mentioned cut-off dates.

- Pradhanmantri Kisan Samridhi Kendra (PMKSK): The Government decided to convert the existing village, block/sub-district/taluk and district level fertilizer retail shops into Model Fertilizer Retail Shop or to establish new ones. Model fertilizer retail shop will act as One Stop Shop for all agriculture related inputs and services. The name of the Model Fertilizer Retail Shop would be Pradhanmantri Kisan Samridhi Kendra (PMKSK). As on date there are 3.3 Lakhs fertilizer retail shops at district, block/sub-district and village levels, all these shops will be converted into model retail shops. The timelines for conversion of these shops have also been prescribed.
- Balanced Fertilizer Use: The NBS scheme encourages the use of fertilizers based on the nutrient content, promoting a balanced application of nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P), and potassium (K). This is part of the government's effort to reduce the overuse of urea and ensure better soil health.
- Soil Health Card Scheme: The Soil Health Card scheme, which was launched earlier but continues in 2024, is aimed at providing farmers with detailed information about the nutrient status of their soils. This helps in the better application of fertilizers, reducing overuse and promoting balanced fertilization. The government is working to expand the reach of this scheme to more farmers.
